Message from the President

As our season is winding down to summer, we are looking for help on the executive, as some of our current members are stepping down for a well deserved rest. Please consider joining our team, starting in the fall. We are a fun bunch, meet only briefly once a month (usually fourth Tuesday of the month at the Library from 7 to 8:30) and get all our work and organization done at that time! If you are interested in any of the roles listed above, please contact me or any member of the executive for more information.

Knowing and Growing

Native Ferns

March 10, 2009

Lis Allison

Pine Ridge Studio

Like many gardeners, Lis did not pay much attention to ferns until she moved to her current garden on the Carp Road. One day in early spring when she was out exploring a far corner of her property she was surprised to find bright green plants growing out of a rock face. This led her to doing some research to find out what they were and the happy discovery that there are many interesting ferns indigenous to the Ottawa area. Most of these are easy to grow and great additions to the garden. She reports that she now has almost 30 native ferns in her garden and is growing more from spores. After years of thinking of ferns as 'those green things at the back', she now finds them fascinating!

Local Summer Garden Tours

Monthly tours that can be enjoyed locally are being planned by several members. So far we have confirmed the following:

June 13 - Ken Far - The Arboritum

This collection of trees and shrubs covers about 35 hectares (86 acres) of rolling land. More than 2,000 varieties have been adapted to the region, some dating back to the first plantings in 1889. The northeast corner of the Arboretum has its own microclimate. Here, you will see magnolias, rhododendrons, a wisteria and others. The lookout on the south-east side offers a panoramic view of the Rideau Canal and Carleton University, while the north-east overlooks Dow's Lake and the surrounding city.

Plant of the Month

AUTUMN FERN Dryopteris erythrosora

Bold and beautiful choice for shady borders and woodland gardens. Dwarf-growing fern, young papery fronds display coppery-red color maturing deep green and deeply cut. Spreads by underground stems to 15 inches wide. Herbaceous. Shade. Grows to 1 1/2 to 2 feet tall. Spore grown. Hardy.

Soil: Ferns prefer well drained sandy or humus rich soil. Elevated beds work well, providing good aeration and drainage.

Light: Indirect light is best for healthy growth of ferns. Avoid direct afternoon sunlight. Filtered sun or early morning and late afternoon sunlight will produce a healthier, stronger plant.

Fertilizing: Ferns that are growing in humus rich soil, will require very little fertilizer.

Watering: Good watering practices are crucial for healthy ferns. During the growing season, you may have to water often. Depending on the weather, this may mean watering every few days. Most ferns prefer a moist, humid environment. Good drainage is also necessary to prevent drowning the plant.

Mulching: Mulching will reduce weeding, keep the soil from drying out, reduce watering, and, if an organic mulch is used, it will improve the soil over time. Mulch after planting and continue to add new mulch as it decomposes. Decaying hardwood mulch, or chopped leaves are also good humus builders.

Tip: The leaf of a fern is called the frond. Remove dead fronds periodically to maintain appearance and health

The Reading Garden

Ted Barnicoat has offered to head up a work bee to expand the patio area to go under the picnic table. Please consider joining the work team for an afternoon. Many hands make light work!
